A windshield, as the name suggests, protects the car's occupants against air entering the vehicle while it is in motion (and makes it more aerodynamic). However, it protects drivers and passengers from much more than wind alone, including rocks and other objects from the road. Should a crash occur, the windshield will also help the car deform as the manufacturer intended, thereby playing another role in protecting the occupant. As a result, a cracked, chipped or otherwise broken windshield represents a potential safety hazard in addition to lowering a car's aesthetic appeal.

Faith Low Price Autoglass explains, "Your windshield plays a vital role in keeping you safe during your journey. While it may keep stones, leaves, sticks and other small pieces of detritus off the road from flying into your face at high speed, it also provides a great deal of strength to your car's structural integrity. In other words, your windshield can absorb a great deal of the shock of a collision. It even helps keep the car intact in the event of a rollover.

The company adds that a windshield also prevents the roof from crushing occupants during a rollover, allows airbags to deploy in the proper position to cushion passengers and more. It also keeps occupants from being ejected from the vehicle during a crash. This is why the company strongly advises their community to bring their vehicle in immediately for a replacement if necessary.

Notably, windshields can be repaired in many instances. Minor chips, for instance, do not pose a huge threat to the windshield's overall integrity as long as they are addressed in a timely fashion. Faith Low Price Autoglass is able to repair the windshield on a wide variety of vehicles, including trucks and cars, but some types of damage cannot be repaired. In such cases, a replacement is the only option. Fortunately for Dallas drivers, the company offers a lifetime warranty on all labor against water leakage, air leaks or any other problems related to the replacement. All of their professionals are highly experienced as well, and hold very high standards.
