Washington DC - Dependable Homebuyers, a local-owned business providing real estate services in Washington DC and Baltimore, MD has seen a noticeable increase of buyers looking for modern kitchens after renovating. "If you want the house you are selling to stand out among the fierce competition in the housing market," says John Foster of Dependable Homebuyers, "then having a newly renovated kitchen may be just the thing to take a property one step closer to being sold."

Along with modern furniture and amenities that buyers can no longer live without such as dishwashers or walk-in closets, an updated kit is one of the most sought-after features for homes on the market. "Agents, builders and real estate professionals are all well aware that a renovated kitchen will make your property more appealing to today's buyers," says John Foster of Dependable Homebuyers.

"You can't underestimate how important it is these days to have top of the line appliances and every convenience possible in a kitchen," says John Foster of Dependable Homebuyers. "It's how we spend most of our time at home after all."

Washington DC battles fierce competition in the housing market, and new homebuyers are looking for modern kitchens. Readers can click here to learn more about what sells houses in DC.

Renovating a kitchen is one of the most daunting tasks you can undertake, but it does not have to be overwhelming. In order to know what needs changing and what should stay as-is, take time before starting on a renovation project and create an inventory list so that all renovations are planned out in advance. For instance: an owner may decide that some cabinets need updating while others don't; or maybe the existing countertops will work if they're updated with new hardware like these sleek brushed stainless steel handles from Home Depot.

Drawing on market insights, a kitchen is enhanced with sleek cabinetry and modern appliances. Cabinets provide more attractive finishes to kitchens while also offering storage for all the gadgets that homebuyers often look out for nowadays such as WiFi-enabled refrigerators or smartphone compatible dishwashers. These are just some suggestions from our expert here at Dependable Homebuyers.

The kitchen should be a place that not only looks good, but also feels good. When buying your new home make sure to take note of the lighting and plumbing fixtures in order to highlight any interesting features on appliances or countertops while maintaining an overall color scheme throughout all rooms for coherence. Changing dated counters with sleek stone tiles will help a home create a look more suitable for modern buyers which is necessary when trying to appeal as many people possible during this competitive market time period.

A great way to attract buyers is by adding unique home amenities like a wine cooler or an espresso machine, customized drawers and creative storage areas. These features are quite expensive but they're worth the price! To get a better idea of what's common in the local Washington DC housing market consult with top real estate agents from Dependable Homebuyers.
