ProMediaAuthority in San Diego, California, has announced a service that emphasizes how some social media management services are very different. The company has revealed that most of these systems are simply dashboards where people can manage all of their social accounts from one location. In contrast, the company has developed a management service that is designed to do away with the problems that some companies face with their existing platforms.

Andrew Stangl, spokesperson for ProMediaAuthority, states, "At ProMediaAuthority, aside from providing that usual service, we can also create the social content and post it too. This is a unique and valuable feature and we believe it is what makes ours the best social accounts manager on the market."

Stangl pointed out that it is also important to note that the company offers a completely automated social media service. The service includes writing and posting the content onto various social media sites, as well as posting images. Those who subscribe to the company's service are also free to post their own content and images if that's what they choose to do, although that it is not required for the service to be effective.

"We also provide metrics for each of their social accounts, so they can see which posts are being clicked on the most, the demographics, and much more," adds Andrew Stangl. "This lets them instantly see that the service is working for them."

He goes on to say that they are inviting the public to check out a demo by visiting their Facebook page to see what the content and images look like, and points out that 100 percent of the posts on the page were done automatically. "The public is invited to like our Facebook page and in return, they will receive a limited time offer of $100 off any of our social media packages by using Promotion Code "pmafallsocial" at checkout," he explains.

ProMediaAuthority offers a wide range of social media services, including their automated social media management platform. Those interested can learn more about the suite of services offered by visiting their company on their official website.
