These local we buy houses companies allow sellers more control over when their house is sold than traditional real estate agencies do.

Evan Roberts, the founder of this company, points out that there are many benefits to using his service over going through a typical agency. One major benefit is that he offers straight cash services without contingencies or a fee. The company does not list its properties for sale, since the properties are not listed on MLS-type sites. This means that real estate agents do not need to show it off like they would if it were listed on these types of sites; and because their specialists want to buy houses directly, there are fewer set up costs associated as well. They also charge no commissions and will cover the closing costs in most situations.

Evan and his team are experts in the field of real estate. Evan and his team offer a quick sale for any homeowner who prefers that option or they can take as much time as necessary to come up with an agreed-upon price if someone would rather have more control. They have over 10 years experience in this industry. The company has been known for paying out top dollar on houses since its inception because it doesn't matter what condition the house is currently in, they will buy it at market value regardless.
