September 28, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Ron's Amazing Products, a Catonsville, Maryland based company and the provider of the popular spy pen camera has announced the release of a new YouTube video explaining how to use the pen camera. The company has explained that they have created and released the video in an effort to show customers how to properly play videos from their pen cameras, particularly in Windows 10.

"Since Windows upgraded to Windows 10, customers were asking us how to play videos from their pen camera," states company CEO, Ronald Hoff. "So, we made this video to help them, and we plan to publish more videos to help our customers in the future."

The video, which can be seen at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bflmtNNHQAE, explains how customers can record and play videos using their spy pen cameras. The video outlines how to play the videos from the pen camera on a Windows 10 based operating system. It is pointed out that videos from the pen will not automatically play to Windows 10 default player, and that a player should be downloaded in order to play them. The video then goes into detail about how to play videos on the suggested player.

The player, which can be downloaded at http://www.videolan.org/, is a free and open source multimedia player that can be downloaded on virtually any system. It plays a number of video files including DVDs, audio CDs, and VCDs, in addition to a number of different streaming protocols. Ron's Amazing Products recommends downloading the player, and explains this process in the provided video, as well as how to access and run videos once the player is downloaded.

"We want our customers to thoroughly enjoy using their spy pen cameras," states Ronald Hoff. "I mean, that's why they bought them and not being able to play videos just because of an upgrade sounds frustrating. This is why we've released this first video in our how-to series, and we will definitely be tackling other issues and posting videos for people to enjoy our products as much as possible."
