A top tree service company in Riverside, CA, Riverside Tree Service has released a video discussing tree care tips for this coming summer season. The video is a continuation of this company's efforts to support tree owners and provide valuable information that will help keep their trees healthy. The video lists six tree care tips and goes into further detail as to why each is important for tree care during the summer season.

A notable point mentioned in the video is that trees need an average of one inch of water per week. Tree owners need to be careful however not to over water. Even though moisture levels may dip a little during summer, it does not mean that trees need to be over watered to keep them hydrated. A quick check of the soil surrounding the tree can help determine if watering is necessary.

The video also discusses the importance of fertilization. It may come as a surprise to some that trees growing in high stress areas, such as urban or suburban environments have greater fertilization needs as opposed to trees growing in natural areas.
