September 29, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Pro Pad Inc., a Mooresville, North Carolina manufacturer, has announced a new line of motorcycle flags that are specifically designed for retired military personnel. The new flags come in two different sizes, and are made of a poly blend, triple stitched for durability. Mike Enzwiler, President of Pro Pad, explains, "We wanted to show our support for our United States military, and we thought that this was an excellent way to do so."

The flags cover all four of the major military branches, namely, the Air Force, the Army, the Marines, and the Navy. The flags are made of a material that is machine washable, and they are designed to be heavy duty to withstand the outdoor elements. Each flag is double sided, and all products by Pro Pad are made in the U.S.A.

Mike Enzwiler pointed out that the flags are made with the highest quality of materials and craftsmanship to show support for active and retired military personnel. The company has designed the flags around the official emblems of the armed service branches, with colors and logos used for authenticity. They also offer American flags and flag poles in various sizes for those who want to show additional support for the U.S.A.

In addition, the company is donating five percent of all sales of the new line of flags and other military products to the National Military Family Association. Mike Enzwiler explains, "The National Military Family Association is an organization that fights for programs and benefits that will help to protect and strengthen our military service men and women. We think that it's a great charity to donate to, and a good way to show our continued support for our service men and women."

The company believes that the flags can be used as gifts for active or retired military personnel.
