Fire safety is an important concern when it comes to camping, glamping or hunting not just for yourself but also for the environment. Of all the safety concerns, fire safety is a critical one. This has been a point of focus for White Duck Outdoors, who manufacture and sell canvas tents that can be equipped with a stove. The company offers the option of a flame-retardant fabric finish on almost all canvas tents, which is unique to the industry.

Salt Lake City, Utah, The United States: When deciding on gear for the outdoors, durability and safety are two critical factors. The better built a product is, the more likely it is to last and to keep its users protected. This is because they can easily protect the users at the right time. Keeping this in mind, White Duck Outdoors has come up with a viable solution for outdoors people.

Its tents are now available with the fire-retardant fabric option so that its users feel safer than before. A flame retardant finish on the tent drastically reduces the chances of a canvas tent catching fire and slows down the spread of a flame. It is designed to meet the CPAI-84 standard for fire safety in tents.

A flame retardant finish is extremely useful, especially if campers plan to use a stove inside the tent. White Duck is also one of the only canvas tent companies to offer this fire-retardant option in bell tents, which is fairly uncommon.

White Duck Outdoors? tents made using this fabric also protect users from other harsh elements such as UV rays and mildew. They?re treated to be water repellent as well. The tents are made from 100% cotton canvas, which is a breathable fabric and is built to last for years.

According to a spokesperson, ?It is our goal to provide safer essentials and accessories to our customers who are outdoor enthusiasts. Thus, we try to come up with something new that enhances both safety and comfort levels. This time, we are offering tents made up of a fire-retardant fabric. Customer experience is at the forefront of our principles as a brand, so we will continue to find innovative ways to making getting outside as stress free as possible.?
