Logan Circle is a quaint, small neighborhood with two historic districts. The area has been designated as both the Logan Addition Historic District and Georgetown Square Residential Historic District in addition to being on the National Register of Historical Places. At its center stands an equestrian statue memorializing Major General John A. Logan but it's not just some random park; this circle remains entirely residential among luxury condominiums, townhouses, apartments for rent or sale.

Logan Circle takes its name from a traffic roundabout on its southern end, where turn-of-the-century townhouses face a circular park with a statue of Civil War general John Logan (that?s him high up on the horse). Originally known as Iowa Circle, the park was renamed by Congress in 1930 after John A. Logan, who lived at 4 Logan Circle. In the center of a circle stand an equestrian statue of Major General John A. Logan sculpted by Franklin Simmons, and a bronze statue base designed by architect Richard Morris Hunt. In 1901, a 25 foot (7.6m) monument was erected as a dedication to President William McKinley, Senator Chauncey Depew, and General Grenville M. Dodge.
