Every year, the national Medicare program loses significant funds as a result of fraudulent activity committed by individuals and entities that deal with the program. This type of activity impacts every taxpayer and is a huge drain on the Medicare program. Arvind Bob Khurana, a prominent whistleblower attorney, helps healthcare employees in Indiana who may have proof of Medicare fraud bring civil lawsuits against these parties on behalf of the government. Mr. Khurana and his legal team represent healthcare employees in civil whistleblower actions, ensuring their welfare and security under the federal False Claims Act.

The CMS (Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services) contracts with numerous people, businesses, and organizations that manage Medicare compensations and process claims. They have to ultimately rely that these individuals and businesses are in compliance with the laws. Sadly, lots of are not in compliance, and that number is growing. Considering the government's shortage of resources and hold defrauders liable, it has to count on private health care workers in the market to come forward with details so they can hold those who defraud the program accountable.

"Fraud against the Medicare program can take many forms," stated Mr. Khurana. "The Fraud can include manipulating healthcare records to earn more from Medicare, overcharging the government, supplying substandard products or services, and many other things. The government depends on private whistleblowers to come forward with firsthand knowledge and evidence of this conduct and the government rewards the whistleblowers for their important support. Through qui tam lawsuits, whistleblowers are able to bring civil claims against those celebrations on behalf of the federal government under the False Claims Act and can be rewarded for it."

The federal False Claims Act is a federal law that renders it unlawful for anybody to make incorrect Medicare claims or otherwise defraud the government. It additionally makes it possible for a health care employee with information of fraud against the Medicare program to submit a whistleblower claim on behalf of the federal government. In exchange for their details and effort, the whistleblowers are entitled to gather incentives of as much as 15 and 30 percent of the financial by the federal government. The act likewise has regulations for whistleblower security against any company retaliation that may result from submitting a case or consenting to a deal with the government.

When a whistleblower comes forward with information and facts relating to Medicare fraud, the case is submitted to a federal district court. It is put 'under seal' while the Department of Justice investigates the lawsuit and the evidence, interviews potential witnesses, and speaks with professionals and company workers. The federal government will then decide if it will step in. If it does not choose to step in, the whistleblower still might continue the case by themselves.

Because healthcare employees may place themselves at peril doing this crucial work, the federal False Claims Act particularly incentivizes them with a considerable part of the monetary recovery. In an effective claim, the federal government can recover as much as three times its losses to fraudulent activity as well as charges for each occurrence of fraud.
