Anime Limited is announcing the launch of its YFU token liquidity pool on June 11th. The YFU token, pronounced "Why-Foo", is a cryptocurrency that serves as a governance token for anime and crypto enthusiasts.

The June 11th liquidity pool launch will be paired with 2 other projects on the BeesSocial platform.

A new NFT collectible we'll be launching every week into the current series. (Bronze, Silver, and Gold according to rarity, (Gold NFT's will be reserved for special characters and probably drops to the most involved community members for now.) Anime Limited's current lineup of NFT collectibles can be viewed on Rarible.

Ashtar, a spokesperson for Anime Limited, responded when asked about "what are NFTs?" He described them as the following: "NFTs or "non-fungible tokens," are unique non-interchangeable digital assets and collectibles." Because the authenticity of each NFT has a unique cryptographic hash, each digital asset can be authenticated on blockchain explorers, such as Etherscan.

Starting in May 2021, Anime Limited has already released one new NFT each week in preparation for the upcoming June 11th release. During this event, 8% of the total supply is released as a reward for staking in the new pool. Additionally, token holders will yield rewards when $yfu is purchased and staked for 12 months.

The June 11th event also marks the start of several other launches for Anime Limited. Ashtar commented, "we're very excited about the support of our community. From the rebrand to Anime Limited to the upcoming CoinGecko listing, we hope this will help us reach a wider range of people including anime fans, crypto enthusiasts, and collectors."

Ashtar also explains the mechanics of the $yfu launch: "80% of $yfu tokens are already locked on liquidity
