Adfilic Announces Updates To Electronic Digital Caliper

September 28, 2015

September 28, 2015 -
Adfilic, a British Columbia based provider of popular home and garden products, has announced an upgrade to their popular electronic digital caliper. First released on the Amazon marketplace just a few months ago, the company has revealed that the digital caliper was very well received by customers. James Chien, company spokesperson, explained, "We have updated our digital caliper to make it even more precise than when we first launched it earlier this summer."

While most consumers who purchased the caliper through Amazon were more than satisfied, the company pointed out that they did receive feedback from some customers that prompted the upgrade. "We are proud to say that with this newly upgraded version, there will not be any issues about the measurement being off 0.1-03 cm," explains James Chien. The company explained that this was the only issue customers had with the caliper, but that they take customer feedback very seriously and strive to do everything they can to keep their customers satisfied.

After reading through the various digital caliper reviews, Chien states that the company decided to do their own research into the measurements, and found out that it was off, which prompted them to perform the upgrade. Since its initial launch, Adfilic's caliper has become one of the most popular measuring calipers on Amazon, and the company feels that this newly designed version may be even more popular than the original.

"Measurements are crucial," points out James Chien. He went on to say that Adfilic strives to always consider their customers when designing new products, or when upgrading existing ones. Some of the reviews on Amazon noted that the measurement may be off just a bit, and the company got to work pulling the caliper and performing testing to ensure that the upgrade would provide precise measurements every time.

Adfilic is a small company that offers a number of consumer products including measurement devices as well as gardening products. Those wondering where to buy calipers can find the digital caliper by Adfilic on Amazon, as well as a listing of all of the company's products on their official seller's page.
