Hollis Center, Maine-based American Mechanical & Plumbing Inc. has been very busy over the last few months taking steps to improve its customers' experience when working with the company. Evidence of this comes in the form of the new and improved website the company has just launched and the fact that they have added some important new services. This is a trend that the company has consistently shown in their over twenty years of existence and figures to be one of the major reasons their clientele has steadily grown over that same time period.

The company owner, Jeff Briggs, stated, "We are always looking for better ways to improve our customers' experience when they are looking for plumbing and water pump services from us. Our new and improved website launch and adding water filter installation, driven points, well pump repair & Leonard valve systems to our services are proof of that. I pledge to continue to do whatever it takes to make American Mechanical & Plumbing one of the most well-rounded and customer-friendly companies in Southern Maine."

Briggs says that launching a new website was a big deal for them because it's in line with them always striving to be as progressive a company as possible. One of the main goals of the new and improved website was to be more user-friendly. This goal was accomplished by doing such things as designing the new website to be pleasing to the eye and not overblown with text and photos. He added that the dropdown menu was also simplified and improved upon and the new website even gives their customers more options to contact them. The information on the new website is also presented in a concise manner to save their customers time and effort when trying to get more information on their services. According to the company owner, the feedback that they have received so far from those customers that have tried their new website has been extremely positive.

The company owner also went on to talk about their two newest plumbing services. They decided to expand their services to include water filtration systems and well pump repair because of popular demand and the important role these two pieces of equipment respectively play in supplying water to a home and ensuring safe & responsible wastewater removal. He pointed out that adding these new services also gets them closer to their goal of being a one-stop mechanical and plumbing services provider for all of those in the areas that they serve. These new services only add to the companies already impressive lineup of mechanical and plumbing services that American Mechanical & Plumbing offers. This includes being a fully licensed & insured master plumber that is capable of doing everything from new plumbing installations, repairs, and custom builds. Briggs mentioned that they also can do all types of propane & natural gas associated tasks, water heater repair & replacement, and they are extremely knowledgeable when it comes to setting up appropriate water filtration systems for their customers.

American Mechanical & Plumbing's services have always been well-reviewed by those that have used them. Evelyn B. from Buxton stated, "I've used Jeff Briggs for a lot of problems with my water and plumbing lines. He is very on top of things and gets to me promptly! I would not hesitate to recommend them to anyone!" Larry S. from Standish proclaimed, "Great trustworthy work at a fair price. 100% recommended.". Frank A. from Waterboro wrote, "Fair price, explains well, and does quality work. Would not hesitate to recommend him." The common theme here is that each of these customers would have no problem recommending the company to friends and family; that is a strong statement about any type of service provider.

This reputable mechanical and plumbing company services many areas in Southern Maine, including all of York and Cumberland Counties.
