September 29, 2015

September 29, 2015 -
London, UK ? Most of the time when one thinks of a beach holiday, Hawaii or even the Caribbean or South Pacific come to mind. There is a hidden gem in the beach vacation tableau that many don't think of or consider ? Great Britain. In keeping with their mission to educate travellers on the VISA process, VisaCompare (www.visacompare.com) has just published a new blog post entitled 'Apply for a Visa to Discover the Beautiful Hidden Beaches in the U.K.'.

The article states that the U.K. is home to many secret beach locations that are waiting to be discovered. It also notes that 'a Standard Visitor visa is commonly required for people who want to travel to the U.K. for leisure. This visa allows you to stay in the country for up to six months'.

The article then points out three specific areas that are often overlooked when planning a beach vacation. Beaches such as Moor Sands and Elender Cove in South Devon. 'Moor Sands offers fine sands that resemble pearl quartz beads, as well as offshore islands with their turquoise waters. Elender Cove, on the other hand, is a smaller beach that offers the best views around'.

With offices globally in Hong Kong and London, VisaCompare has a mission to provide help specifically with the Visa application process and acquisition. They are a totally independent company with no preferences or affiliations to any country, immigration company/immigration service provider or destination that is an internationally owned and funded comparison search engine. They help those searching connect with immigration companies and service providers worldwide.
