Canadian Immigration Lawyer Announces Upcoming Course On Express Entry Canada

October 14, 2015

October 14, 2015 -
Lethbridge, Alberta based Canadian Immigration Podcast has announced that they will be offering courses and guides in the future to assist individuals in better understanding Express Entry The most recent free advice published is to help those who need help finding the correct National Occupational Classification (NOC Canada).

Mark Holthe, founder and owner of Canadian Immigration Podcast, has years of experience in regards to immigration to Canada, and has been offering expert advice on the topic for many years. "We felt that it was time to broaden the scope of people that we can help," Holthe states.

Holthe is an ex-immigration officer with Canada's Citizenship and Immigration department, and now operates as an Immigration Attorney. He states that many citizens may not be able to afford an attorney to help them understand laws regarding Express Entry Canada, and says that he is glad to be able to help with courses and guides that will fully explain the program and the processes required.

"I created my website to assist people who need answers to immigration questions," states Holthe. "So many people find it difficult to comprehend some of the laws, and it has become increasingly difficult to get answers. My goal has always been to assist where I can."

Mark Holthe states that CIC Express Entry can be difficult in many cases because citizens may not always be able to speak with a CIC officer. He states that he has created his resources in an effort to assist those who may not be able to find assistance elsewhere. His upcoming course will explain CIC, which is a classification system for jobs in Canada. Using the NOC system, the CIC categorizes those entering the country for work. Those who are not considered to have foreign work experience that is considered to be skilled, are often not granted points for work experience, and Holthe says that the entire system can be complicated.

Anyone who is planning to file for Canadian immigration may want to visit the Canadian Immigration Podcast website, sign up for Holthe's course when it becomes available, and contact his office with any additional questions.
