

Top Baltimore HVAC Company Says AC Maintenance is Critical for Health and Wellness

Supreme Service Today, one of Maryland's top HVAC service providers, advises Baltimore and area residents to prepare now before summer heat picks up and reduces the availability of technicians. The AC system of every household should be in good condition before summer hits. Before the demand for AC services and tune-ups occurs, it is important to ensure that the air conditioning unit of any home or business is ready to keep up and cool effectively by having a qualified, trustworthy company perform tune-up and maintenance services. Delaying preventative maintenance is risky, and might escalate into much larger repair bills if left neglected. Being stuck without AC during one of the hottest times of the year (in one of the East Coast's warmest regions) carries serious health risks.

"We always urge clients to get their AC systems checked before the summer temperatures really kick in," Denny Kougiannos, owner of Supreme Service Today, says. "When temps rise, so too does the demand for our technicians, which means there may be fewer technicians available to promptly address any issue our clients might have. If a replacement unit is needed, demand may be high and availability will inevitably be lower. Being stuck in East Coast heat without AC is not something we would wish on anyone. Do not delay when it comes to caring for the household's AC system."

Summer 2021 in Maryland is expected to be hotter than usual, with the hottest periods typically occurring during the early to middle parts of June, July, and August, and people have already seen this trend begin this year. Rainfall is expected to remain at normal levels, which will provide some relief from high heat, but will not directly make up for the long-term investment of making sure that the AC system is in good working order. Plus, with the recent heatwaves seen locally and in other parts of the country, hotter temperatures are coming soon.

Supreme Service Today is completely transparent when it comes to pricing, does not engage in pushy up-selling and is focused entirely on addressing the client's specific issue as quickly as possible. Their reputation has been solid for years and can be seen in their many online reviews and customer feedback. So far in 2021 the company has experienced strong growth across all of its product and service verticals and is showing no signs of slowing down.

“We are homeowners too, so we understand the importance of having that peace of mind when a customer comes through the door that everything is working just as it should be,” Kougianos says. “We want that for our clients as well, and that really is our job: to make their home as comfortable as they need them to be, and to live up to the investment they are making in owning and caring for a home.”
