HydroCleaning is providing high-quality moss removal and roof cleaning services in the Portland/Metro area.

The roof is the first and the most resilient defense of the home against the elements. Maintenance and upkeep of the roof should be of the utmost priority for any homeowner who wants to make the property last and hopefully get a good return on their investment when it is time to sell. Dark stains, moss, and algae can easily take hold on a roof, especially in a region like Portland where the climate is cold and humid for most of the year.

A popular solution to rid the roof of the growth of plant matter is to clear it using a pressure washer. It is an effective tool that can easily remove all kinds of staining on the roof. Pressure washing can also increase the aesthetic value of the roof by getting rid of the dark sheen caused by overgrowth, restoring the roof to its original color, and enhancing curb appeal.

Pressure washing can be used to clean the roof shingles but the technician who does so has to be very careful. High-power pressure washing can cause the shingles to dislodge due to the force of the water and even make them shed surface material. Once the surface of the shingle is broken, it becomes much more susceptible to wear, tear, and rot. It can also void the home?s roofing warranty. The pressure washing technician has to be experienced enough to use just the right amount of pressure depending on the roofing material.

HydroCleaning is providing highly skilled pressure washing technicians who have been trained to handle all kinds of roofing material starting from asphalt shingles and cedar shingles all the way up to metal roofing. The company says that different roofing materials require different approaches for cleaning and its technicians have the experience and know-how to tackle each of them effectively. The company?s technicians ensure that they deep clean all surfaces to reduce the likelihood of the plant matter growing back any time soon.

The company recommends its soft washing techniques to clean the roofing of any algae, mildew, stains, mold, moss, and lichen. Soft washing refers to a pressure washing technique where the water stream is maintained at lower pressure but at just enough force to clean the roofing materials thoroughly. The company also says that they use environmentally friendly cleaning solutions that won?t have the noxious smell of industrial chemicals and will be safe for everyone living on the property.

A spokesperson for the company talks about the need for roof cleaning and moss removal by saying, ?When it comes to the structural integrity and the aesthetic beauty of your home, the roof plays a big part. You want to make sure that you perform regular maintenance on it or it will snowball into a much larger and unmanageable problem as time goes by. Soft washing the roof is an excellent way to prevent the buildup of organic matter and preventing it from seeping into the surface of the shingles and taking root. Once the shingles are weakened, you will be looking at an expensive roof repair or a new roof installation. So make sure you are inspecting your property?s roof and having it washed on a regular basis.?
