July 23, 2021 -
Georgia based Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. - Albany is reaching out to the wider community to explain personal injury claims and their legal process. The law firm has been trusted by thousands of clients involved in car accidents, motorcycle wrecks, 18-wheeler accidents and more all across the state.

In legal terms, a personal injury is any injury to an individual?s body, mind or emotional health, as opposed to an injury to their property. Personal injury claims are filed against the person or entity that caused the harm through negligence, gross negligence, reckless conduct or intentional misconduct, and in some cases on the basis of strict liability. While the exact damages (what the injured person may be compensated for) may differ from state to state, they generally cover the injured person's medical bills, pain and suffering, diminished quality of life and potentially lost wages. This is true throughout the US.

Ted Derrickson, a representative for the firm, says, ?If you find yourself injured in an accident that happened due to no fault of your own, you are eligible to file a personal injury claim. It is as simple as that. No matter where the damage occurs, whether it is in the workplace, the road, a government building or maybe even your own home ? if you were harmed as a result of something that you aren?t responsible for, you are owed damages.?

He continues, ?Most people aren?t really aware that there are laws that exist to protect them and help them in situations like this. They suffer and they move on, taking a hit to both their health and their quality of life, but the whole personal injury claims process exists to make sure that you are well compensated for anything that may have happened to you because of someone else?s negligence.?

Georgia injury laws allow an injured victim to bring a claim in a variety of circumstances. These circumstances involve automobile and bike accidents, slip and fall accidents, workplace accidents, defective products, medical malpractice, nursing home abuse, dog bites, construction accidents, premises liability and more. A more comprehensive list can be found on the firm?s website.

All of the personnel were very professional; they kept me informed at every step, they were courteous, they were efficient and they completed my case most satisfactorily. Always kept in touch with me about everything that was happening and gave great advice.
