Arrowhead Clinic in Duluth Explains Who Pays For Medical Bills After A Car Accident

July 21, 2021

DULUTH, GA - July 21, 2021 -

A car injury can leave a victim with neck and back injuries that carry long-term consequences. An experienced Duluth car accident chiropractor is an expert in accident injury treatment. Dr. Darris Gentry, the leading chiropractor at Arrowhead Clinic in Duluth, suggests victims seek expert chiropractic help immediately after a car accident, adding that some victims might worry about paying the bill. According to the car accident chiropractor, an insurance company of the at-fault party is typically responsible for paying the medical cost of chiropractic care after an accident. The chiropractic clinic explains more about that in a blog post that can be read here: https://www.arrowheadclinic.com/duluth/do-insurance-companies-pay-for-car-accident-chiropractors.

Typically, car insurance companies will cover any necessary accident injury treatment. Victims who have suffered a neck or back injury will usually require chiropractic care, and serious injuries often require multiple visits for regular treatment. The insurance company will want to know who is at fault before determining whether to pay for the treatment. When another party is at fault, their auto policy will cover the victim?s injury claims, explains Dr. Gentry, adding that liability insurance covers medical expenses. In a previous press release, Arrowhead Clinic in Duluth Shares The Best Things To Do After An Auto Accident.

The top car accident doctor in Duluth explains that the personal injury settlement is responsible for covering chiropractic costs if the victim was not at fault. According to Georgia law, reasonable and necessary medical expenses arising from a personal injury are a form of economic damage. This means victims have the right to pursue compensation from the at-fault party for their economic and non-economic damages. The top car accident chiropractor in Duluth, Georgia, has been providing the best chiropractic care for victims for decades. Insurance companies often dispute the victim?s claim of chiropractic treatment, adding that it isn't a necessary treatment.

Dr. Gentry suggests seeking legal help from a top personal injury attorney to fight for maximum compensation in an accident injury compensation claim. According to the Duluth chiropractor, a car accident lawyer is experienced in helping fight for the victim?s rights to compensation for their medical treatments, including chiropractic care. A victim of a car accident requires immediate medical assistance to treat hidden and visible injuries. If left untreated, such injuries might become chronic and result in debilitating conditions. The chiropractors at Arrowhead Clinic specialize in accident injury treatment and take the victim?s physical and financial recovery seriously.
