August 04, 2021

Fairfax, Virginia - August 04, 2021 -

Fairfax, Virginia?s Roof.Net is a company that?s proud to share some of the glowing reviews that it receives. Such was the case with a new 5-star review in which the customer stated they were very appreciative that the company kept the costs of some additional repairs very reasonable. This recent review was left on the company?s Google Maps Business Listing and can be seen here at https://goo.gl/maps/Y8LYgk9pACpQor4H7. It is just one of over 400 reviews that have been left on this listing and when those reviews are averaged the company boasts a perfect 5 out of a possible 5-star rating.

In the above-mentioned review, Luisa T proclaimed, ?Ken quickly sent me a quote and worked hard to fit my roof replacement in. They did an amazing job. His guys were very professional, they worked hard, and the roof looks great! The work was more extensive than we anticipated and required replacing many pieces of underlying plywood. This made the job last two days instead of one. The price did not increase, other than paying for the new sheets of plywood. Ken communicated clearly, and we were very pleased with the whole experience! Highly recommend!"

This is not the only customer that it was discovered they needed some extra work once their roof replacement was underway and left a highly complimentary review. Joe Wasilewski who also needed some plywood sheathing replaced stated, ?Ken and his crew did an amazing job re-roofing my house and replacing damaged or rotted plywood underlayment, all in one day! The men were very meticulous in protecting plants and patio items and did an excellent job with the roofing details and cleanup. Ken was great to work with from the very first meeting, did all the things he promised including scheduling the work, supervising on-site most of the day, and making sure everything was done correctly. Best of all his price never changed. It was also very competitive with several other quotes that we received. I highly recommend Roof. Net and Ken. They certainly earned my 5-star rating.? The company owner, Ken Briesemeister, says, ?Roof replacements are one of those jobs that not all of the problems that are present in a roof can be seen until the old shingle or other roofing material comes off. I realize that when someone commits to getting a whole roof replacement done, that this can be a significant investment for them. That?s why if we run into a situation where some extra roofing work needs to be done, I try to keep the costs of those additional repairs just as reasonable as possible. I do this because that?s the same way that I would hope a contractor would treat me if they discovered some additional problems when doing some type of service work for me.?

Briesemeister continued by saying that he does everything that he can to detect potential hidden roof problems during the initial roof inspection. This includes walking the entire roof and looking for signs that the plywood underneath may need replacement. Some of the signs that indicate there might be sheathing problems include sections of the roof that appear to be bubbled up or dip lower and pond water. He mentioned that sometimes rotted plywood sheathing will also feel spongy when stepped on. Other areas that he checks during a roof inspection include signs of leaks around chimneys and vent pipe flashing. It?s also normal for him to make sure a roof is properly vented during an inspection. The company owner does this because his experience tells him that improperly vented roofs will take away from the new layer of shingles' useful life.

This is the type of commitment Briesemeister shows to his customers is what has made Roof.Net one of the highest-rated roofing companies in the entire country. This has also earned them many accolades including being named a ?Best of the Best Award? winner for several years running. They have earned over 20 national awards in all and the company also maintains a BBB best rating of A+. He mentioned that in addition to accepting nothing less than his crews doing the highest quality work, it?s also a company policy to only use the very highest quality roofing materials that are available.
