New York - Civil rights laws have been created so as to secure and ensure everybody's basic liberties under the law. When people feel they have had their civil liberties violated by the justice system, they frequently require to look for the help of a New York car accident lawyer so as to help them.

Particularly in today's world, civil liberties in the United States have been under fire and continue to be on the forefront in day-to-day headlines and erupting social unrest. Few know the predicament of those who have had their civil liberties violated better than David S. Leigh, Esq. As an experienced New York car accident lawyer, his customers count on Mr. Leigh to hold those who may have broken their civil rights accountable for their actions.

"We like to believe, here in the US, that we represent the freedom and security of all individuals, however, we understand that this, unfortunately, isn't always accurate. Every day, we see where our systems have failed some people. While the law guarantees equal rights for all, we still see those laws being violated, not simply by individual discrimination but also even by the very organizations that are supposed to safeguard and support those basic civil liberties," Mr. Leigh said. "Our firm believes in the core principle that everybody should have justice, but, many of our clients know, from first-hand experience, that justice is not afforded for all in our system. That is when we are called upon to use the power of the law to level that playing field."

Thanks to his staunch advocacy of those who have been victims of infractions including police brutality, excessive force, sexual assault, discrimination, and other civil rights violations, he has received numerous positive reviews and accolades from his clients regarding their representation.

Bryce Allen from New York states: "David is a first-rate trial lawyer. Having had the opportunity to both watch him on trial and personally try a case with him, I can say that I would be glad to have him working with me on a case. His delivery is excellent, as is his ability to connect with a jury."

The simple facts play out in the streets and neighborhoods. In NYC, civil liberties injury claims are some of the most often submitted claims in the recent past. Federal civil rights claims have increased exponentially over the past couple of years. Sadly, Mr. Leigh understands that many civil liberties are breached by the organizations tasked to secure them.

Although the justice system can feel overwhelming to anyone, many face it each day believing that the system is already rigged against them. Unfortunately, that mindset has helped perpetuate abuse in lots of pockets of government and law enforcement. Mr. Leigh and his law office have dedicated their work to the civil rights of others, to ensure that they are heard and that those who breach civil rights are held liable.

As knowledgeable New York civil rights attorneys, Mr. Leigh and his firm, the Law Office of David S. Leigh, P.C., are vigilant protectors of those whose civil liberties have been violated. He has dedicated his career to help make sure that everyone's voice is heard under the law, especially those who have had their civil liberties violated by the justice system.
