According to the recent news update, the latest numbers indicate that New South Wales has been hit by an influx of COVID-19 with 633 cases in less than 24 hours. This breaks records for the amount seen within one day and is already threatening lives across this state.

Due to this Covid pandemic that is currently sweeping across Australia, the management of Patioland announced that it would be temporarily closing its showroom located in Blacktown to follow the protocol set forth by governments mandating this action for all businesses. However, they are still open for quotations and constructions. Patioland's website is always available and their customer representatives will help answer questions from their customers.

All personnel are trained and equipped with the proper protocol in social distancing, plus health and safety precautions to ensure that they only do what is necessary for the safety of everybody. To get started, customers can speak with a Patioland representative. They have all the necessary tools and software required to design any patio using various styles and layouts.

Patioland delivers custom patios throughout Sydney and the surrounding areas. Most of Patioland's products are available in a variety of colour schemes. The majority of their products have warranty protection, ensuring that the customer will get the best value for their money. Patioland's services include opening roofs, insulated roofing, pergolas roofing, timber decking and carports.

With over 30 years of experience in the industry, they should create an outdoor living space that can be proud to call their own.

The management goal is for their customers to be delighted with the finished product. By visiting Patioland's website and filling out their online form, clients will be contacted by a member of their team who will discuss customers needs in detail. On going promotions and announcements are posted on the website.
