August 30, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. - Valdosta is a personal injury law firm that has a long record of success in its area of law. Much of the credit for that is those at the firm realize that helping a client pursue a personal injury claim is not a one-size-fits-all proposition. That's why the legal team at the firm's Valdosta office makes sure to litigate each claim on a case-by-case basis in a way that gives each client the best chance of success. This firm's Valdosta location also shares the same "One Call Does It All" philosophy as its other Georgia offices as they will handle all aspects of a personal injury matter from start to finish once they have agreed to take on a case.

Tim Derrickson, the spokesperson for Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. - Valdosta, says, "When someone comes to us requesting help in a personal injury matter, we don't consider there to be any type of legal playbook because of the nature of their injury. That's because every injury has unique characteristics surrounding it that will give each client of ours the best chance of having their claim honored. It's the reason why we thoroughly investigate the events surrounding a client's personal injury incident and then put our many years of law experience in this area to work designing a case that leans heavily in our client's favor."

The firm's spokesperson went on to say that as a trusted Valdosta personal injury law firm, their expert legal team of accomplished personal injury attorneys can help someone determine if their injury was due to the negligence of another person or business entity. Once they believe a client has a legitimate chance of success when pursuing an injury claim, there are two ways they will work to get a claim settled in their client's favor. The first is by presenting such a solid case that the defendant or their insurance carrier realizes that it's in their best interest to settle without going to court. He added that their Valdosta personal injury legal team has enough experience in this area of law to get the majority of their cases resolved in this manner. If a settlement cannot be reached with the defendant or their insurance carrier, then the case will then go to court.

Derrickson also discussed some of the types of compensation that they are known to seek on their injured clients' behalf. This includes the two most common forms of compensation which are lost wages and reimbursement of current medical expenses. He says that if a case warrants it, they will also look at potential legal avenues towards such forms of compensation as future medical expenses, pain & suffering, mental anguish, other related monetary losses, and even punitive damages. Some of the personal injury areas that the firm is very good at litigating include car and other moving vehicle accidents, slip & fall accidents, workers' compensation, medical malpractice, nursing home violations, dog bites, defamation, and assault.

Those that have taken advantage of the personal injury services that this law firm offers have been very complimentary of the legal help they have received. Brian Ray stated, "Mr. Kenneth, thanks so much for all of your help, you just don't know how much we appreciate the handling of our matter, by you guiding us thru this rough time. It all worked out. Thanks again." Zack Rider proclaimed, "Kenneth Nugent is one of the best accident attorneys I have ever hired. He is incredibly bright, thorough, and truly concerned about favorably resolving your legal case."

Derrickson added that in addition to their Valdosta office, they also have 7 other offices around the state of Georgia that have established a track record of success when it comes to handling personal injury cases. This includes their Atlanta, Albany, Macon, Savannah, Duluth, Columbus, and Augusta law practices. He added that personal injury legal assistance is available from them 24-hours a day.
