August 23, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

According to the latest news update, the government of New South Wales, Australia, is extending the Greater Sydney lockdown until September 30th as they try to control a recent outbreak of COVID-19.

The Premier Gladys Berejiklian made these announcements on Monday in response to new cases and deaths from coronavirus, which has now reached 644 with four fatalities. Ms Berejikliyn said that the latest extension would help protect those who are vulnerable or at risk. She also announced other restrictions would be put into effect starting Monday.

Despite uncertainties, Focused Growth management announces that they are still operational and open for new clients. With the ability to contact their staff without a face-to-face transaction, they can offer assistance anytime.

The management is very aware of the concerns their customers have concerning visiting or meeting face-to-face. As such, they provide all means necessary for communication via website and email when possible. The company continuously monitors recommendations by the Australian Department of Health and NSW State Government to keep up as new information arises about how this virus can be prevented from being contracted while also fostering a safe environment.
