Health and wellness company H&W Quality Products has recently launched their new website to highlight products like the coccyx seat cushion. "The company was founded on the premise of bringing health and wellness solutions to the consumer. Our products will always be primarily focused on alleviating discomfort of everyday tasks," explained Greg Dunsworth, spokesperson for H&W Quality Products.

The coccyx seat cushion, which can be seen at <http://www.amazon.com/dp/B00YI4KH9I>, has been found to help in reducing pressure on the coccyx, hip bones and tailbone. The company points out that this product is an example of how the company is pursuing its primary goal of providing comfort. This is done by getting rid of the pain often experienced from seating for long periods of time.

The company points to customer testimonials as evidence of how they are achieving their goals. Huda Altameemi says, "Love it. I leave mine at work because I simply forget to take it with me, but there are several times in the evening that I wish I had it with me. It really helps with the pain. Plus, the price is right. Even if it helps you half as much as it helps me, it's worth the money. Good luck and 5 stars for this product." Meanwhile, Luke Williams says, "Great product! I ordered due to a tailbone injury and impending transatlantic flight. It works well, even for a 6'4" and 260 lb guy. I will use it in the future for long flights, since it makes my seat higher and leg angle better."
