Health and well-being company, H&W Quality Products, has announced that they have made available the hydration running belt at their new website. The said product can also be seen on Amazon at <http://www.amazon.com/dp/B010CHU64A>. The company explained that regardless of where customers choose to buy the Hydration Running Belt, or any of the other products, they will still be receiving the same quality of customer service. This includes getting a 100% satisfaction money-back guarantee if customers are not completely happy with their purchase.

The Hydration Running Fuel Belt Waist Packs are part of the company's latest additions to their line of products. "This belt has been made with durable canvas and an adjustable waistband that is secured with a buckle clip. We want our customers to feel confident knowing that they can hold all of their necessities while running, securely," said Greg Dunsworth who is the spokesperson for the company. H&W Quality Products added that their waist belts come with five pockets, with each of them having three sturdy zippers, so there should be ample space for all of those necessary items that runners need.

At time of writing, the company has received positive reviews on their hydration belt, and a recently satisfied customer, Carrie F., made the following statement: "I'm more of a traveler, than a runner, but I was really happy that I ordered this hydration belt. The belt is easily adjustable and there's even a handy little clip to tuck away any extra belt overlap. It stays in place without shifting up or sliding around and has lots of great features including the lined zipper pockets, easy access velcro pouch, and a bungee strap for a water bottle! I've taken it with me on various hikes including Camelback Mountain here in Phoenix - and it's the perfect outdoor companion!"

H&W Quality Products urges those who are interested in their products to visit them via their website at <http://www.hwqualityproducts.com/>. They also have a dedicated Facebook page at <https://www.facebook.com/HWQualityProducts> where clients are encouraged to join in many of the conversations that are currently held through this social media platform.
