The Albany, GA based law firm of Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. is reaching out to explain what legal options are available to a client in a wrongful death case. While the firm understands that this can be a highly sensitive topic, especially since the victim is likely to be a family member, they urge everyone in this situation to examine their options in full as soon as possible. It is also recommended that they speak with an attorney.

A wrongful death, or accidental death, is a legal term that refers to an incident where an individual is killed as a result of another party?s intentional, reckless or careless actions. This loss is more often than not extremely difficult for their surviving family members to process, and their grief can be exacerbated by the practical necessities that surround the death of a loved one. For instance, families will often find themselves grappling with several new (and ongoing) financial challenges, such as funeral expenses, lost wages and so on. In certain cases, should the victim have survived long enough to require medical assistance, their family may unfortunately have to deal with medical bills as well.

In such cases, the family can seek compensation that will help them move forward after the tragic loss of a loved one. According to Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., there are many situations that can lead to a wrongful death, including motor vehicle accidents, medical malpractice, nursing home abuse, workplace accidents and more.

One of the major reasons a family should seek advice and assistance from an attorney who is experienced in this practice area is that wrongful death cases tend to be quite complicated. For instance, the facts surrounding the victim?s death will almost universally be in dispute, particularly since those responsible (and their insurance companies) will want to minimize their responsibility as much as possible. According to the firm, they are likely to argue that they took every reasonable measure to protect the people on their premises and the death in question was no more than an unfortunate accident.

Ensuring a successful outcome will involve proving that this is not true ? and the responsible party?s actions can be linked to the circumstances that led to the death of the family?s loved one. This often requires the involvement of industry experts who can investigate the incident and determine exactly what happened. Fortunately for families in Albany, Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. has long developed a professional relationship with many individuals and teams in various fields, allowing them to put both the best medical experts and accident reconstructionists to work investigating the cause and circumstances of a loved one?s death.

Additionally, their legal team can ensure that the case will stay on track and avoid any delays despite the vast bureaucracy typically involved in the process. All forms and paperwork will be completed correctly and submitted on time, ensuring that the family can maximise their settlement from life insurance proceeds, military benefits, pensions and Social Security benefits.

The firm adds that families who seek compensation will help far more than themselves. Those who are held responsible in wrongful death cases are more incentivised to change the practices that originally led to the death, thereby making it less likely that a repeat incident will occur in the future.

Former clients can attest to the lengths the firm goes to in order to win cases on their behalf. M. Allen says in a top-rated Google review, ?Rhonda was our case worker. She kept up with all of my medical bills and made sure I knew what was going on whenever I called. My attorney, Matt Kirtlink, is spectacular. He worked hard to get me a fair settlement after my accident with a direct hit from a semi. I highly recommend him and Rhonda!?

Similarly, D. Jenkins says, ?I received excellent service at the Kenneth Nugent office in Duluth. Everyone was very professional and understanding of what I was going through. Always kept in touch with me about everything that was happening and gave great advice. And I would like to give a personal thank you to Tawanda Sheffield for always keeping me informed and talking to me when I wasn?t having a good day; happy that she was on my case.?
