Heirloom Culinary, a kitchenware business that was co-founded by retired airline pilot Jack Liguori in Rushford, NY, are proud to announce that their best kitchen shears now come with a lifetime guarantee. Liguori, the mastermind behind the shears, wanted to design something that lasts a lifetime. As such, the guarantee should last equally long.

"I designed the kitchen shears not just to be beneficial in the kitchen, but to have the potential to be lifesaving," says Jack Liguori. "I would never put my name to any product that I didn't believe could actually achieve that, and that would last a lifetime. The lifetime guarantee, therefore, needed to be included."

Jack Liguori designed the shears after he had an accident in a plane himself. He found himself stranded for several days and found that what he missed most was a small, multi-functional tool that he knew wouldn't break. He had difficulties cutting himself out of his harness, building a shelter, finding food and generally being comfortable until help arrived. This experience pushed him to make something that could help avoid this in future.

The kitchen scissors are so strong that they would have been able to help him out in all aspects of his ordeal. While he initially offered them in a satin lining box, the company has now also included the scissors in a burlap lining. This is in a celebration of the history of the shears.

Customers have been highly appreciative of what they consider to be the best kitchen scissors. "You will not be disappointed by any means in your purchase," says Debbie. "They are made of heavy duty stainless steel throughout the entire set of scissors. They will never rust and you can wash them by hand or thru the dishwasher. Another great thing is that they are made in the good ole USA! No cheap stuff made in China and these come with a lifetime guarantee."

Customers have also collectively been impressed with the dedication and commitment that Heirloom Culinary has to providing exceptional customer service. Any issues are immediately resolved. For Liguori, customers are the lifeblood of the company and they must be treated right.
