Rushford, New York based kitchen accessory company, Heirloom Culinary, has announced the launch of their heavy duty kitchen scissors. The company has made available the scissors that were designed by Jack Liguori. Liguori is a retired pilot, and explains that his flying experiences inspired him to create kitchen accessories. He said, "I wanted to continue flying after my retirement. It was actually my flying that inspired my kitchen product creation, particularly our kitchen shears."

Jack Liguori points out that having a tool that can handle different tasks is essential, both in flight and in the kitchen. The newly released kitchen scissors are specifically designed to handle more than the regular cutting tasks, and come in a burlap packing. They have been assured to have flexibility and durability, which are two things that Liguori believes are essential in the cockpit and in the kitchen. He says, "These are truly the best kitchen scissors you will find on the market, and we are proud to give them our name."

The scissors are constructed of heavy duty stainless steel for durability, and the company guarantees that they will never come apart while cutting, no matter how wide the blades are opened. In addition, the designer has determined the usual weak points of scissors and reinforced them. Darnell, an Amazon customer, says, "These are truly the best kitchen shears I have every owned. As soon as you remove them from the silk laced box you can tell these is a quality product. I was so tired of having to replace kitchen scissor after scissor! These are simply amazing and so worth the cost."

The company points out that because they are made of stainless steel, the shears will never rust, and they are tough enough to cut anything, including bone or sheet metal. They are also designed with a special bone notch for cutting through poultry bones and round objects, and the handles are ergonomically designed for comfort and fit. The company backs the shears with a lifetime guarantee.

Those who need more information about the heavy duty kitchen shears can take a look at the company website or their Amazon page.
