New York - Family law is frequently focused around the point in times that test marriage partners and their families. Divorce, child custody, asset division, spousal support, visitation, and child support; these can be extremely charged decisions that may impact everyone involved, both emotionally and financially. When feelings run high, it is typically challenging for couples to think clearly about the repercussions of their immediate actions and decisions during a divorce.

Juan Luciano, Esq., a skilled divorce attorney in New York, understands his role as the emotional, financial, and legal representative for his clients. There is typically a fine line in between being an emotional support system for his clients, keeping continuous keeping open communication lines between partners, and yet knowing when to use the aggressive steps needed to help make sure that his client's rights and best results are being fully represented.

"Most of the time, I'm working with clients who may be going through an extremely painful and vulnerable time. At this difficult period, they must make critical choices that will impact them and their children for years to come," explained the divorce attorney. "Although I recognize that I can't take away the discomfort they may be feeling, I can help make these critical decisions. Important decisions should be made while keeping the client's psychological comfort and their dignity as an important element in all our interactions. While we try to keep open lines of interaction and cooperation with the other partner, there are some instances when this is simply not possible or efficient, and we need to rely on more aggressive strategies. I follow the client's leads whenever I can, but, I likewise have to be honest with the client. It is a fine line that we must walk as attorneys."

Mr. Luciano is a firm believer in the power of respect and empathy and credits his success to his ability to treat his clients with a level of sensitivity. While cooperative strategies are consistently his first go-to approach, he also knows there are times when cooperation may no longer be fruitful. Because of his unique approach, Mr. Luciano continues to garner favorable testimonials and reviews from his clients:

Price Kaci from New York states: Juan Luciano is a terrific attorney. He is very smart, a great listener, and understands how to walk that very fine line between being tough and compassionate. Naturally, he abide by all my wishes and I definitely felt certain he had my best interests at heart. I highly recommend his firm. Everyone I dealt with was very professional and kind, and the office is conveniently located.

Because divorce typically influences the rest of an individual's life, Juan Luciano works hard to bring legal talent and years of experience to secure the most favorable outcome for each client he represents. Although an individual might not feel any sense of optimism during the divorce, Mr. Luciano comprehends that life does go on after a divorce, and the decisions made in the middle of the turmoil will color the future for the law office's clients. Mr. Luciano tries to supply a level of clear-mindedness during those moments when his family law clients may not have the ability to think clearly.

With a skilled divorce lawyer guiding them, a challenging situation can often be expertly negotiated, thus making it possible for each party to reach common ground. Mr. Luciano believes that getting the right representation can make a big difference in both the tone and cooperation between former partners during the divorce process.
