September 03, 2021

Denver, Colorado - September 03, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Denver Colorado's Tyler Tysdal has been very active helping entrepreneurs around the United States to successfully start and grow businesses to achieve financial freedom. Recently Tysdal partnered with Robert Hirsch to start Freedom Factory, a business brokerage that brings their combined experience together to help business owners maximize their companies value for the best selling price. Together they released a video detailing important things to know when selling a business. The video then wraps up with Tysdal and Hirsch discussing how long it can take to sell a business.

Robert Hirsch started his entrepreneurial journey when he was only 16, having now over 25 years of experience growing and scaling businesses. He was even the host on A&E's television show Save It Or Sell It, an unscripted documentary special that focuses on struggling small businesses in America. Hirsch would show the struggling small business owners how to maximize their options convincing them to either sell their business or save it.

Tysdal himself started as an entrepreneur when he was only 13 years old. His educational journey then completed with earning his MBA from Harvard Business School giving him a solid foundation working with investors in private equity funds and portfolio management. Tysdal is grateful for his own success and loves freely giving his time on the phone to business owners with questions they have in their struggling businesses.

Prior to founding Freedom Factory, Tyler Tysdal managed a growth equity fund in association with several celebrities in the sports and entertainment industry. One project Tysdal is well known for is a portfolio with Leesa.com, a company that grew rapidly to more than $100 million in revenue and had a truly unique visionary social purpose to help people without beds. One mattress is donated for every ten sold. The project has made a huge impact in peoples lives with over 35,000 mattresses donated.

With Tysdal's entrepreneurial skills and business experience continuing to increase, he is able to make a greater impact on the world through the company as a business brokerage consultant. Helping others achieve freedom is really what Freedom Factory is all about. The paradox of freedom is that people typically believe freedom means being free from attachment to anything. As people get older, they discover that true freedom is living for a purpose helping others.

Freedom To Spend Time With Family

Tysdal's greatest joy is the freedom he has to spend time with his wife Natalie Tysdal, a former television news anchor in Denver, and his 3 children. Tyler and Natalie believe in being very active with their children helping them to grow up knowing the importance of helping others as they continue into their own lives and adventures.
