Long Beach, California ? When James, a Long Beach resident, started noticing signs of ill-health on his tree crown, he decided to get rid of the tree to keep the disease from jumping to the rest of the trees surrounding the landscape. Luckily for him, instead of going with DIY tree removal as he hard decided earlier, he hired a professional tree removal company Long Beach. Working with Long Beach Tree Experts helped James save one of his most loved shade trees ? a 100-foot white oak.

?When we arrived on James? landscape,? said the company?s CEO, ?Our tree service removal Long Beach team did a thorough inspection of the tree to determine if there is a possibility of saving it. This is something that we do before every tree removal Long Beach procedure as it has helped us save thousands of trees over the last 2.5 decades. Our team of tree cutting professionals Long Beach did notice signs of ill-health but also determined that the symptoms had not spread to the main part of the tree. This is when we decided to help James save his tree.?

The company?s chief of field operations noted that when a disease is just sitting on the branches, it is possible to keep it from spreading by removing all the branches. ?We just called in our tree trimming team Long Beach,? said the company?s chief of field operations, ?Working hard to get rid of the diseased branches, we were able to turn the tree from diseased to healthy in a matter of hours. What impressed our client, even more, is that we later cleaned up and carried the diseased branches.?
