Miller's Home Improvement, a roofing company in Clinton Township, MI, has provided several reasons why asphalt shingle roofs are better than metal roofs in a newly released blog post. The article points out that while metal roofs are better than asphalt shingle roofs because it is longer-lasting and more durable, asphalt shingle roofs have several advantages over metal roofs. These include: peace of mind; better and versatile performance; and better hailstorm performance. Those who want to check out this article can do so at the Miller's Home Improvements blog page.

First of all, a newly replaced 25- to 30-year-old asphalt shingle roof provides 100 percent peace of mind compared to a metal roof that is already a third or halfway through its whole lifespan. Secondly, galvanized steel is not a great option for seaside or riverside property because of the risk of corrosion, asphalt shingle roofs may be a better alternative because nothing corrodes in such kind of roofing material. And finally, while asphalt shingle roofs have a shorter lifespan compared to metal roofs, they are as capable as metal roofs when it comes to resisting and deflecting hailstones and other high-velocity missiles. Furthermore, they can easily be repaired.

?In the final analysis, any roofing material that you choose for your home or business is really only as good as the way it was installed, so make sure to find a roofing company that has expertise and familiar with that kind of roofing material in your area,? says Eric Miller, owner of Miller's Home Improvement. ?Also, choose a roofing company that is really concerned about customers and will always suggest the most appropriate roof material for their roofing needs.
