New York - Family law is typically centered around the occasions that test marriage partners and their children. Divorce, custody, division of assets, alimony, visitation, and child support; these can be highly charged decisions and can impact everyone involved, both financially and emotionally. When emotions are involved, it is typically tough for couples to think clearly about the repercussions of their immediate actions and decisions during a divorce.

Juan Luciano, Esq., a skilled family law attorney in New York, understands his role as the financial, emotional, and legal representative for his clients. There is often a fine line in between being a support system for his clients, keeping open communication lines between partners, and yet understanding when to bring out the aggressive steps needed to help make sure that his client's rights and best results are being completely represented.

"Most of the time, I'm dealing with clients who may be going through a very vulnerable and painful time. They are required to make sensitive decisions that will impact them and their kids for many years to come," explained the divorce attorney. "Although I understand that I can't take away the pain they are feeling, I can help them make these essential decisions. The important decisions must be made while keeping the client's psychological comfort as well as their dignity as an important element in all our conversations. While we attempt to keep open lines of interaction and cooperation with the other partner, there are some circumstances when this is not possible or productive, and we have to rely on more aggressive methods. I try to take my cue from the client whenever I can, but, I likewise need to be honest with the client. It is a fine line that we must walk as lawyers."

Mr. Luciano is a firm believer in the power of respect and compassion and attributes his success to his ability to treat his family law clients with a level of sensitivity. While cooperative techniques are always his very first go-to approach, he also knows there are times when cooperation may no longer be worthwhile. Because of his unique approach, Mr. Luciano continues to amass favorable testimonials and reviews from his clients:

Price Kaci from New York says: "Juan Luciano is a terrific attorney. He is very smart, a great listener, and understands how to walk that very fine line between being tough and compassionate. Naturally, he abides by all my wishes and I definitely felt certain he had my best interests at heart. I highly recommend his firm. Everyone I dealt with was very professional and kind, and the office is conveniently located."

Because divorce typically influences the rest of an individual's life, Juan Luciano works hard to bring legal skill and his years of experience to secure the very best outcome for each client he represents. Although an individual may not feel any sense of optimism during the divorce, Mr. Luciano comprehends that life does go on after a divorce, and the choices made in the middle of the chaos will color the future for the law practice's customers. Mr. Luciano tries to supply a level of clear-mindedness during those moments when his clients may not have the ability to think clearly.

With an experienced divorce lawyer guiding them, a challenging situation can frequently be expertly negotiated, thus making it possible for each partner to reach common ground. Mr. Luciano believes that getting the right representation can make a big difference in both the cooperation and tone between former partners throughout the divorce process.

Mr. Luciano serves individuals in Manhattan, Bronx, Westchester, the Upper East Side, and throughout New York City. You can find out more about him and his practice by visiting his website.
