Santa Ana, California ? When Tree Service Experts Santa Ana was invited to handle tree removal in the home of one Juliana Bella, they were expecting to find a dead or severely damaged tree on her compound. However, the company?s team of tree cutting professionals Santa Ana was surprised to learn that the tree Juliana wanted to be removed was only showing a few signs of ill-health.

?She was worried that the tree had a communicable disease,? said the company?s chief of field operations, ?and she did not want the disease to spread to the neighboring healthy trees ? this is why she thought working with our tree removal team is the best idea. However, after inspecting the tree, we learned that the disease was not communicable and the tree?s health could be restored.?

Speaking after working with Tree Service Experts Santa Ana, Juliana had the following to say, ?They told me that instead of removing the tree, they could prune it to remove the infected branches, which would give the tree a chance to recover. Once we agreed on this, the company?s tree trimming team Santa Ana used the bucket truck to go up the tree and remove all the branches. After pruning the tree, they carried the waste. Since the tree pruning day, they have been back twice to check on the tree?s progress and to recommend the best course of action. It's been 3 weeks and my pine is looking healthier.?
