September 20, 2021 -
Fort Worth, Texas ? After years of acting as a landmark in the city of Fort Worth, a 100-year-old oak tree has died. According to the reports provided by a professional from Fort Worth Tree Service Experts, the tree?s death could have been prevented had the tree owner acted quick.

Announcing a mourning day for the important landmark tree, Fort Worth Tree Service Experts CEO had the following to say, ?Oaks can live to be over 300 years old. The fact that the heritage oak tree died at only 100 years old is quite saddening. And what?s more, is that the tree died because of lack of proper maintenance. The disease that killed it first affected its branches ? if tree pruning had been conducted early enough, it would have been enough to keep the disease from spreading throughout the tree. However, now that the tree is gone, all we can do is take care of the remaining heritage trees so that we can keep them around longer.?
