That's why they are always prepared to respond 24/7 to provide any water damage restoration Glenview services that their customers need.

The company's owner, Justin Parat, stated, "One thing that we know for sure at our company is that the sooner we get started helping you clean up after your home or business has been flooded or gets water where it does not belong, the better chance you have of saving whatever has gotten wet and preventing further water damage. Time is definitely not your friend in a flooding situation. This is why we always make sure that we have the personnel, equipment, and vehicles available to rapidly respond to any water damage situation that you are experiencing."

Parat went on to add that when they arrive on the scene, they will first quickly assess the situation and shut off any flooding sources if this is at all possible. Then they will go about removing any standing water that is still present. This is followed by setting up advanced drying equipment, chemically treating surfaces to prevent mold and mildew growth, and taking steps to salvage furniture and other items that have become wet during the water damage-causing event. He says that their response time is so fast that their water damage company has an excellent track record when it comes to saving floor & wall structures, furniture & upholstery, carpeting, and other items that have come into contact with water from flooding, leaks, or other unusual events. The company owner also brought up that they at Excel Restoration Service Inc. have a variety of ways that they can help people recover from a water event that puts many gallons of water and moisture where it does not belong. He stated they are fully prepared to help with any storm damage, flood damage, sewage, or any other type of water damage cleanup needs that a customer asks them for help with. They also can help mitigate and undertake wood floor water damage, damage from water heaters bursting, drywall water damage, cabinet water damage repair, and all other types of Disaster Restoration and Water Damage Repair & restoration services.
