October 05, 2021 -
Bryter Restoration of Wilmington, a company based in Wilmington, NC, is happy to announce that they are ready to provide flood damage and water damage cleanup and repair services, whether the flooding was caused by a storm or faulty plumbing. They can also provide mold remediation and removal services because mold growth is usually a consequence of flooding or parts of the home having excessive moisture as a result of water damage.

First of all, Bryter Restoration advises homeowners and other property owners to be always prepared for flooding and water damage because the Carolinas has a history of experiencing some of the worst hurricanes in the country, particularly during the months of September and October. Thus, doors, windows, and other vulnerable parts of the home or building should be secured and reinforced if the weather forecast says a storm will pass through the area. Hurricane shutters or pre-cut plywood may be used to protect these parts from the winds and any flying debris. Any loose items in the yard should also be tied down if they can?t be brought inside the home.

It is also important to think of ways to prevent water from getting inside the home. For instance, it is advisable to always make sure that the gutters are clean and free from any debris, like tree branches and leaves, that will prevent the rainwater from draining off the roof properly so that pools of water will not accumulate on the roof and the water will not go to any parts of the home where it can weaken or damage structural elements.

Nevertheless, in the event that a home or building has been affected by flooding or water has managed to get inside, Bryter Restoration of Wilmington can help with the provision of water damage restoration services. First, they will inspect the home, evaluate the damage, and develop a damage restoration plan. Next, they will pump out the water and then use some equipment to remove any water that has been retained in the walls, floors, and other parts of the home, including furniture. After drying, they will proceed to clean and then sanitization not just for parts of the home but also for various belongings, such as upholstery, furniture, clothing, and more. And finally, they will restore the home or building back to its original condition.

And in the event that there is mold growth, they can provide mold inspection, removal and remediation services. The mold remediation professionals from Bryter Restoration are experienced and knowledgeable about mold growth and how to bring mold levels back to their natural levels. Every mold situation is unique although the general mold remediation process will be the same. Mold growth usually occurs where there is high humidity, such as when the water has managed to get inside the home and when there is water damage. Mold will not only have negative effects on the appearance of the home, blackening grout lines, staining the drywall, and causing dark spots on walls and sidings. They can also be a health hazard because the microspores they produce can cause allergies and breathing problems for certain people. The mold remediation process begins with an inspection of the home or building. And after removing the water and moisture, they can start getting rid of the mold, while ensuring that the spores will not get to other parts of the home.

Bryter Restoration was established after having provided water damage restoration work for several years in various counties in North Carolina, including Carteret County, Pender County, Onslow County, Brunswick County, and Horry County, and the main cities of Myrtle Beach, Moorehead City, Wilmington, Carolina Beach, and Wrightsville Beach after various hurricanes and storms wrought havoc in the area. They can help families with their water damage restoration services to help bring back homes and other buildings to their previous conditions and to prevent further damage due to mold and the weakening of structural elements.
