Suji Siv, CEO of Clean Group, said in a webinar, ?Covid-19 pandemic is forcing people to change their way of living. People are adopting digital ways of doing all activities whether it is buying groceries or managing their office work. However, Cleaning is a job that needs cleaners to visit the site physically and perform all the tasks by hand or by using tools or equipment. However, we manage to make some changes in your cleaning process, we also added a few new tools and machines, and cleaning products suggested by WHO and CDC. We also organized covid-19 training for our cleaning staff and provided them all the necessary safety and protection gear. By mixing all of these with the experience of our staff, we started providing Covid Cleaning services in Sydney.?

He also explained their covid cleaning process a few days ago in a webinar by saying, ?Our cleaners first wear all the protection and safety gears before entering customer?s property with all the cleaning stuff. After that, they will conduct regular and deep cleaning at the entry part first, and then they will clean all the internal parts of the office. If required they can use hot water with detergent to make all the surfaces clean and shiny. After cleaning all the surfaces properly they will use sanitisers and disinfectants to make all the surfaces germs-free, in this step they will use a sprayer, wipes, and some other handheld cleaning tools. Cleaners will pay extra attention to all the high-touch surfaces. After completing all the cleaning and disinfecting tasks, they will safely collect and dispose of all the garbage and disposable safety gear. Business owners will receive Covid-19 certificate only when all the tasks from the covid cleaning checklist will be successfully performed by their cleaners.?
