Colorado based Wireless Pro has announced the release of its new iPhone cables. The company states that these cables are more affordable when compared to Apple's stock cables, and that they offer many benefits over having just one cable. Carlos Salguero, spokesperson for Wireless Pro, states, "We've released our new iPhone cables that offer a number of benefits over a standard cable for the iPhone. One of the best things is that you can leave your phone case on while charging."

The company states that their cable offers benefits over having just one cable, because the need to share cables often means that one person's phone will not get charged. Carlos Salguero recommends that customers have an extra charger in case of emergencies, when other cables are in use. He explains, "When you have more than one person in your home who uses this type of cable, and you only have one cable, you run the risk of your battery dying before you get a chance to charge it. This is exactly why we've released our product - to help consumers keep those batteries charged at all times."

He also says that their cables, such as the iPhone 5 cable, are much more affordable than those purchased through the Apple store, giving customers the opportunity to buy more than one for multiple phones. The company points out that they use only the highest quality of materials to produce a durable cable that will last for many years.

The iPhone cable is available in packs of three, giving a benefit to households that have more than one iPhone user. Carlos Salguero says that since the product's initial release, they have heard from customers who appreciate that the product contains more than one cable. He says they designed the package for convenience, and that the inclusion of three cables gives users the opportunity to keep one at home, one in the car, and one at the office for charging phones whenever needed.

The iPhone charging cables are available now through the Amazon marketplace. More about Wireless Pro and the consumer products that they offer can be seen on their Amazon seller's page or on their official Facebook page.
