London, UK ? A recent Guardian news article reports that with crime on the rise, many people are seeking 'the latest crime deterrents and prevention devices to ensure their personal and family?s safety'. One company, it reported, is 'even developing a smart pepper spray'. In order to help educate London residents about this, Locked-out LockSmiths (www.lockedout-locksmiths.co.uk) has just published a new blog post authored by Brendan Connolly entitled 'London Locksmiths: Homes are Best Protected by Tough Doors and Windows'.

According to the Guardian article, 'The Defender, is a high-tech smartphone-linked pepper spray that has taken crowdfunding platform Indiegogo by storm. With the push of a button, The Defender will not only spray the assailant, but also snap a photo of them, fire it off to the local authorities, and blast an alarm to alert passersby. It hit its target goal of $100,000 within 24 hours, and there are currently 2,100 units on pre-order'.

?People should not forget that their homes are still best protected against burglaries using well-secured doors and windows,? states Connolly. ?Many trusted London locksmiths know this as these home components are the primary barriers domiciles have against natural and human forces.?

The article relates that 'Reliable locksmiths are equipped with the latest industry knowledge and extensive years of experience securing doors and windows to competently say that tending to these parts of the home is vital to safety and security. They'll even tell their clients the strengths, weaknesses, advantages, and disadvantages of all available home security options so they can make informed decisions?.

?While having a security gadget can be comforting,? stated Connolly further, ?Fortifying doors and windows is still a tried and tested home security method that homeowners should not easily disregard.?
