November 01, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Happy Bunnies Child Care School, an Austin daycare, reveals that they have a blog page that provides important advice to parents regarding the early education of children, such as spooky themes for artwork and stories for Halloween, teaching children how to carve pumpkins, finding daycares with cameras for the security of the children, outside play for children, cooking and baking for children, how children can explore the various occupations of parents, and how parents can choose the best preschool for their children.

Magdalena MacLeod, School Director of Happy Bunnies Child Care School, says, "Happy Bunnies Child Care School is a happy place for your happy children. You have a great daycare school right in the heart of Oak Hill, at the Y intersection between Highway 290 & Highway 71 in Southwest Austin."

She adds, "Places are limited and rapidly going at Happy Bunnies Child Care School in Oak Hill, Austin. We are limited to just 94 places across all rooms and age groups. Some rooms and age groups already have a waiting list. Get your child on the list right now ? book a free consultation. It?s completely free, and there?s no obligation. It?s a ?first come, first accepted? basis. Getting yourself on the list as soon as possible gives your child the best chance to attend our Oak Hill preschool when you are ready.?

Parents can easily compare the daycare costs in Austin, TX and the costs for Happy Bunnies Child Care School. Parents who are interested in learning about their costs can also visit their website. Child care is an important investment for many parents but with the unique system, curriculum , and they many years of experience of Madeline MacLeod and the teachers, many parents find the costs to be more affordable than they had actually expected.. They want to point out that in contrast to other daycares, they actually show their actual rates in simple and easy to read terms.

They also want to point out that a major component of the costs is the teachers, who have been ensured to be some of the top professionals when it comes to early child education. They also accept registration from subsidized children and they can also help in checking the parents? eligibility with the Austin Workforce Commission. Under this scheme, the amount that parents will pay will depend on their take home pay. The Childcare Services department will be the one to set the amount that Austin parents will pay for daycare costs based on their household income. The child care costs can be substantially decreased under this scheme.

Parents who have already experienced the kind of service provided by Happy Bunnies Child Care School have provided highly positive reviews about the daycare. For example, Holland E. gave them five stars and said, ?I cannot say enough good things about the team at Happy Bunnies. As a first time mom, dropping off my 3 month old for the first time was the scariest moment of my life. The regular updates and the loving care she gets at Happy Bunnies have made these 6 months with them (my daughter is now 9 months old) a dream. There is nothing better than knowing I am leaving her with people who care.?

Happy Bunnies Child Care School is owned by Magdalena MacLeod, who has been operating schools for several years. Her chain of schools was initiated in 2008, when she took over three well established preschools and daycare centers near London, UK. Those three schools at that time had already been operating for 20 years. It was in 2018 that she took over the preschool that is located in Oak Hill in Austin. The previous owners wanted to retire after running the school since 1993.
