Each and every year, the United States Medicare program loses billions of dollars as a result of illegal activity performed by individuals and entities that deal with the program. This affects every taxpayer and is a substantial drain on the Medicare program. Arvind Bob Khurana, an experienced healthcare whistleblower lawyer, helps healthcare employees in Maryland who have proof of Medicare scams bring civil suits against these parties on behalf of the government. Mr. Khurana and his legal team represent healthcare workers in civil whistleblower actions, ensuring their safety and protection under the federal False Claims Act.

The CMS (Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services) contracts with lots of individuals, providers, and entities that manage Medicare reimbursements and process claims. They have to trust that private citizens and entities are in compliance with the laws. Regrettably, a lot of them are not, and that number is getting bigger. Because of the government's shortage of resources to police and hold defrauders responsible, it must often depend on private health care employees in the market to come forward with information so they can hold those who defraud the program liable.

"Fraud against the Medicare program can take many forms," said the Maryland healthcare whistleblower lawyer "The Fraud can be adjusting patient records so as to get paid more from Medicare, surcharging the government, supplying subpar healthcare services or products, or any other activities. The government depends on private whistleblowers to come forward with firsthand knowledge and proof of fraudulent activities and the government rewards the whistleblowers for their important support. Through qui tam suits, whistleblowers are able to bring civil claims against those parties on behalf of the federal government under the False Claims Act and can be rewarded for it."

The federal False Claims Act is a federal law that makes it unlawful for anyone to make false Medicare claims or otherwise defraud the government. It also allows health care personnel with information of fraud against the Medicare program to file a whistleblower lawsuit on behalf of the government. In exchange for their details and effort, the whistleblowers may be entitled to collect benefits of between 15% to 30% of the funds recovered by the federal government. The act likewise has provisions for whistleblower protection against any employer retribution which may result from filing a claim or accepting a deal with the government.

When a whistleblower steps forward with information and facts concerning Medicare scams, the case is submitted in federal district court. It is put 'under seal' while the Department of Justice examines the complaint and the proof, interviews potential witnesses, and seeks advice from professionals and company workers. The government will then decide if it will step in. If it does not choose to step in, the whistleblower still may continue the case by themselves.

Since health care workers put themselves at peril doing this crucial work, the federal False Claims Act highly incentivizes them with a considerable part of the financial recovery. In an effective claim, the government can recuperate up to three times its losses to fraudulent activity as well as charges for each event of scams. "My job as a Medicare whistleblower lawyer is to represent these brave private citizens, to help protect them and keep them anonymous, and to work hard that they are compensated for their work," proceeded Mr. Khurana. "Those healthcare workers in Maryland who know of fraudulent activity can call our office, and we would be happy to go over how whistleblower lawsuits may work and how the whistleblower may be rewarded and shielded. With their courageous support, we can help hold Medicare fraud in control and hold those who perpetrate such scams accountable for their actions."
