As a family owned-and-operated business, The Pest Control Company is highly conscious of how important it is to protect their community from all kinds of pests, particularly those that may carry disease or otherwise upset the delicate balance of the local environment. They also recognise that pest control has to be applied at every level to ensure a uniform degree of protection, and this is why they are equally willing to work with both residential and commercial customers. All their technicians are fully licensed and insured, and their experience in the field ensures that customers can simply rely on their expertise to handle any pest-related issues that may plague their property.

Tommy Horozakis of The Pest Control Company states, "Customer satisfaction is our top priority no matter what a job may entail. In pursuit of this goal, we believe that it is important for our customers to understand our recommendations and every possible alternative, including the possible benefits and drawbacks. This helps build confidence in our work and gives our customers an opportunity to learn more about their pest problems and what they can do to help prevent such issues in the future.? He adds that inquiries are always welcome, and customers can discuss their needs as extensively as necessary with a technician from The Pest Control Company.

According to the company, cockroach control is currently one of their most popular services, partly due to how difficult it is for private individuals to handle an infestation by themselves. These pests can carry several diseases, making it vital that an infestation be dealt with as soon as possible. Fortunately, homeowners and businesses across South Sydney can now call The Pest Control Company for a timely solution to their cockroach problems.

Horozakis explains that the company has long taken measures to avoid doing more harm than good in their bid to eliminate an infestation of any kind. When it comes to cockroaches, therefore, they employ an array of safe, environmentally-friendly products that kill all cockroaches in the area without causing undue harm to the surrounding plant and animal life. The team takes extra care when working in houses in order to keep both children and pets out of harm?s way at all times. Since the company was established in 2004, their technicians now have (at least) a decade?s worth of experience maintaining safety in tough conditions.

?I enquired about an issue I was having at home regarding fruit flies,? says a top-rated Google review from Kirsty M. ?I found the customer service to be exceptional. They told me everything i needed to know, answered all my annoying questions and provided advice to help me save some money. I will definitely be using this company in the future. Thanks heaps.? Many of the other reviews on this platform also praise the company?s high quality service, attention to detail, professional conduct and respect for their customers.

The Pest Control Company is able to handle virtually every type of pest their customers may encounter, including bed bugs, fleas, pigeons, rats, spiders and more. Those who suspect such creatures may be present on their property are encouraged to contact the company today for a quick pest inspection. Their pest control services can then be tailored to address the problem in a manner that suits the situation at hand. Given present circumstances, the company is also pleased to inform their community that all services can be delivered with respect to official Covid-19 safety guidelines.
