Erectile Dysfunction FAQ's Answered By Men?s Health Experts

November 19, 2021 -
Atlanta, GA-based Choice Men?s Health recently updated their website?s FAQ section to include more insight on erectile dysfunction (ED). While ED can be perceived as an embarrassing problem that few men wish to even talk about, the clinic encourages their community to refer to these FAQs in order to learn more about their condition and what can be done to treat it. Choice Men?s Health specializes in addressing a range of men?s health concerns, and patients may schedule a consultation with their team to seek a personalized and effective erectile dysfunction treatment.

One of the most common questions the men's health clinic receives concerns what treatment is most effective for ED. While a variety of approaches can be used, Choice Men?s Health states that each patient will need a treatment designed specifically for their unique needs. This is because there is no single known cause for erectile dysfunction. Instead, a variety of physical and psychological factors can contribute to an individual?s likelihood of having ED.

This touches on another question that the clinic receives: whether erectile dysfunction is similar to impotence. The clinic clarifies that these terms are often used interchangeably because they describe the same issue, which is the inability to sustain an erection for the purposes of sexual intercourse, either recreationally or for procreation. Notably, this should not be confused with infertility, which refers more to a partner?s inability to produce sperm and so on.

?When it comes to treating someone?s sexual health,? the clinic explains in one of their answers, ?no two people are alike, and the treatment for ED will be different for everyone at our men?s health clinic in Atlanta. From emotional factors affecting the inability to achieve an erection to blood vessel injuries, there are many different reasons why erectile dysfunction occurs. Our experienced ED specialists will sit down with you and design a personalized treatment plan to help you enjoy sexual activity again.?

Another important question that men often want answered is whether their erectile dysfunction is permanent. Choice Men?s Health reassures their community that not achieving (or having difficulty maintaining) an erection on occasion is nothing to be too concerned about. This is natural, and most males will experience at least one instance of ED over the course of their lifetime. However, it becomes an issue that needs to be addressed when it happens frequently ? or at least often enough that it inhibits the individual?s ability to enjoy sex or otherwise negatively affects their sex life with their partner.

An estimated 30 million men are experiencing ED in the United States. The factors that contribute to ED, according to the FAQ, include cardiovascular disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, injuries to the pelvis, nerve damage, traumatic brain injury (TBI), and other neurological injuries or disorders. Such medical conditions can interfere with the blood flow to the penis, thereby preventing an erection or making it difficult to sustain. Choice Men?s Health adds that certain medications may have side effects that lead to ED, such as prescription drugs that are prescribed to treat health conditions, emotional issues, and so on.

The clinic asserts, however, ?No matter what the causes are, it?s crucial that if you start to notice a drop, or loss, in sexual function, that you talk to your doctor about it. Or contact one of the best men?s health clinics in Atlanta, like Choice Men?s Health. We offer same-day treatment and can help you with clinically proven treatment protocols.?

Choice Men?s Health understands that privacy is of paramount importance to their patients, and they take several measures to ensure that all the information they receive about a patient is kept safe and secure. Every consultation is completely confidential as well, and any piece of insight the clinic learns about a patient will only be used to develop a treatment for their condition. Nothing is ever shared with an outside party.

The clinic?s respect for confidentiality and privacy, combined with their proven treatments, makes them an excellent choice for men who want to take control of their health and get their lives back on track. Those looking for a treatment of ED, low testosterone, and even premature ejaculation are welcome to contact Choice Men?s Health today to discuss their needs further.
