

MeetPositives.com Google Dating App for Positive Singles Now Available

December 03, 2021

Chicago, Illinois - December 03, 2021 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

MeetPositives.com wants positive singles to know that their STD dating app is now available for download. Positive singles are single people who have been diagnosed to be positive for a particular sexually transmitted disease (STD). The app offers the same services available on the Meet Positives website where positive singles can register for membership and join a community made up of positive singles giving them a chance of meet people like them and possibly go on a date with the goal of potentially having a long-lasting relationship. The primary benefit would be positive singles avoiding the rejection and embarrassment they have often encountered when the person they were dating came to know about their condition.

Michael Task, a spokesperson for MeetPositives.com, says, ?We understand what it?s like to have a secret, which is why some positive singles may not want an app on their mobile device. Our website has been designed to operate 100% on any type of device. No matter if you use an Android, iPhone, Tablet or Desktop, our platform is 100% auto-responsive to all devices you?re using. But if you prefer using an app, we have an STD dating app that provides all of same features as our website, plus swipe right, local connect and safe connect.?

The Meet Positives community was established because dating with herpes, HPV, HIV, or any STD can be embarrassing and positive singles often experience rejections that will ultimately affect a person's self esteem especially when it comes to dating. Meet Positives serves as a dynamic private STD dating platform where members are given the chance to find other positive singles who fully understand their situation giving them the confidence to date normally and without the fear of getting rejected because of their condition. Their app can be utilized to discover friendships and dates, and perhaps long-lasting relationships and romance.

There are a number of factors that differentiate Meet Positives app from other similar apps. These include the fact that: it has more daily app installs; about 57 percent male and 43 percent female use this STD dating website and app; it is the fastest growing app for positive singles; one can search by STD/STI; hundreds of messages being sent each hour; one can search by location; protection provided for the user's real identity; ability to match by disease; most likely to make a connection with the app; one can search by male, female and couple; ability to search according to love, romance, intent, marriage, just make a new friend, or for fun; and matching by preference.

Members of the Meet Positives community are allowed to use the database of profiles to look for someone they believe is compatible with them. But that is not the sole benefit provided by Meet Positives to registered members of the community. The community has the purpose of providing positive singles with a way to discover that person with whom they can establish a long-lasting personal relationship. The platform and the app offer a discussion forum where members can get some idea on how to look for someone and develop such relationships. Members can also post on the online forum important advice to guide and help others.

With more than 20 years of matchmaking experience, Meet Positives has a Trust and Safety team who have developed a good reputation. Beginning in 2019, Meet Positives has served as a stand alone dating site for positive singles. However, it is not the same as other STD communities in that Meet Positives is not a member of an affiliate network. In contrast, Meet Positives serves community members on its own to make sure that members are able to enjoy the benefits offered by the community.

Those who would like to learn more about the services offered by Meet Positives can visit the Meet Positives website, or contact them on the telephone or through email. And for those who are interested in the app, it is available for download from Google Play.
