BALTIMORE, MD - December 09, 2021 -
Clipper Construction, a company based in Baltimore, MD, wants to inform businesses and other commercial property owners in Baltimore and neighboring areas that they can serve commercial maintenance service calls. They can provide this maintenance service to local businesses, corporations, universities, hospitals, and more. These are usually small projects that can either be an emergency repair or a routine maintenance task. Examples include: a hospital needing to have their parking lot re-line; a local restaurant who wants a water line replaced due to an emergency; a college campus that requires a dorm lobby repainted; and an office building requiring the replacement of the shutters.

Every commercial building or property will require maintenance services sooner or later. Whether it is a small office building, an office park, or a corporate campus, maintenance services are required to ensure that everything will be running smoothly and nothing will disrupt operations. The occupants of the properties and building will need to feel comfortable in their space to be able to do their tasks properly. That is why, Clipper Construction, aside from providing design build construction services, also has a team of contractors ready to respond to calls from commercial clients when an emergency repair is needed or they require a routine maintenance service to be performed. Furthermore, a commercial property that is not cared for properly can deliver the wrong impression to potential customers and investors. For instance, a restaurant with dusty and dilapidated windows and doors will not likely be frequented by customers. Retail stores that look shabby and don?t look like they are being cared for properly are not likely to get many customers. And people are not likely to go to hospitals with poor lighting and shabby looking walls. Commercial building maintenance needs may include: trash and pest removal; regular mowing of lawns, landscaping, and maintenance of lawns; repair or replacement of floors; replacement or installation of carpets; painting of the interior and exterior parts of buildings; carpentry and drywall services; deep cleaning of buildings; electrical, plumbing, janitorial, and handyman services; light construction; and more

In addition, there could be some structural defects in a commercial building that are not noticed by the untrained eye. Such defects will need to be remedied properly and Clipper Construction is ready to send its team of construction professionals who know what to do for such kinds of problems. Such issues can?t be entrusted to just anyone. Rather, it is essential to have commercial construction experts take a look at it and provide the necessary repair.

For instance, a pipe may have burst and there is flooding in an office areas or a storm has caused a lot of damage to the commercial building.
