Hilton Head Island, SC - Delta Roofing, a Hilton Head Island-based home service provider, is bringing relief to homeowners in the area by providing several options for residential roofing they can afford.

One of which is the Modified Bitumen Roofing Bluffton SC, a type of asphalt-based roofing. This type of roofing system is preferred by many for it can withstand harsh environmental elements. In addition, asphalt is a popular option for American homes for it is economical and easy to install.

Apart from that, asphalt roofs are known for their durability. Depending on the owner's location, it can last from 15-20 years. Delta Roofing also notes that asphalt roofing can be in various colors and styles to suit almost any home.

Furthermore, Delta Roofing offers several other types of roofing for every homeowner. Another popular option for residential roofing is metal. Metal roofing or shingles are lightweight. If a bit of wear and tear starts showing up on this roof, it can be easily repainted instead of a complete replacement.

Those who want elegant, sophisticated-looking, and long-lasting can choose a slate roof. According to Delta Roofing, slate tiles come in various colors, including black, which creates a dramatic effect when installed on roofs or floors. However, they are usually a little heavy compared to other roof types. Thus, they need extra care when installing and need excellent insulation and proper maintenance.

The Residential Roofing Services also provide and install ceramic roofing tiles. Ceramic is resistant to fading, fireproof, long-lasting, with an average lifespan of 50-70 years, but they are not usually ideal for areas where the weather fluctuates.

On the other hand, wood shakes and cedar shingles are durable in any climate, and they're perfect for hot or sunny areas. This type of roofing can withstand harsh weather conditions. This roofing material is also recommended for those who want to save on energy. Wood shakes act as a natural insulator that can keep a house cool during the summer and warm during the winter.

Delta Roofing likewise knows how to install synthetic slate shingles, a material made from engineered polymers combined with recycled plastics and rubber. Synthetic roofing materials weigh significantly less than natural stones, making them perfect for those homes that cannot support the heavyweight of natural slates.
