

Rose Sanders Explains How to Know When a Person Is Eligible to Hire a Personal Injury Attorney

December 20, 2021

Houston, Texas - December 20, 2021 -

Rose Sanders, a law firm based in Houston, TX, has released a blog post explaining how to know when a person is eligible to hire a personal injury lawyer. This blog article was written by Charles Sanders, co-founder and partner at the firm, and examines those personal injury situations when it really makes sense to hire an attorney. Actually, the lawyers at the firm can help a person who has been injured find out if he or she is eligible to receive compensation and determine the best course of action to recover the financial losses suffered, such as lost wages due to missed work, hospitalization, and more. Examples are when a person had an accident resulting from the negligence of another person, such as in a car accident or the person slipped and fell because someone failed to clean up a spill.

Charles Sanders explains, "In Texas, personal injury claims are typically based on the theory of negligence. To succeed in court with a case related to this legal theory you must prove that your injuries were caused by someone's fault and not just bad luck or coincidence; they need to have been careless enough for proof through the preponderance of evidence - meaning that your injury claim is more likely valid than invalid."

To succeed in their case, plaintiffs will generally have to demonstrate to the court the presence of five factors: duty, breach of duty, causation, proximate cause, and damages. First of all, it must be shown that the defendant had a certain duty to act or not act in a certain way that would have prevented the incident. Second, there was a breach of duty or the defendant failed to do his or her duty. Causation has to do with the circumstances under which the breach of duty resulted into the injury suffered by the plaintiff, as opposed to the incident being mere coincidence. It must be shown that the defendant's breach of duty was the proximate cause of the injury. And finally, evidence must be provided to show that the plaintiff suffered damages.

Demonstrating the above factors is not always easy because there are many variables to consider. For instance, in a car accident, there are many possible contributors to the accident, such as weather conditions, road conditions, or speed limits. It is therefore essential to get the services of an experienced lawyer who is familiar with the various factors that may contribute to a car accident. Founded in 2018, the Rose Sanders law firm has the goal of offering dependable counsel and effective legal representation for people in Houston and surrounding areas, particularly with regards to personal injury, family law and entertainment law. People who were injured because of another person's negligence can rely on the attorneys from the firm to aggressively represent their interests to help them receive the compensation that they are entitled to for medical expenses, the pain and suffering resulting from the injury, and any lost wages. Whether the personal injury case involves a car accident, slip-and-fall or medical malpractice, they will carefully evaluate the circumstances surrounding the incident and then strive to get the best possible result for each client. Meanwhile, their family law practice focuses on paternity and guardianship legal issues, including all legal problems regarding divorce and legal separation, as well as child support and custody, spousal support, distribution of property, and annulment.

Charles Sanders has experience in all facets of personal injury law. He received his law degree from the Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing, MI, and he established Rose Sanders with his wife Erica Rose, who is also a partner at the firm. Erica Rose obtained her law degree from the University of Houston Law Center and was previously an actress, starring on "The Bachelor" and many other TV shows afterwards.
