October 28, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Spencer Stevenson of Spexhair also known as the Online Hair Loss Mentor, is celebrating an increase of 50% in web traffic from 2011. When the blog first had a major impact on the hair loss community, The website has been live for several years but in the past 4 years Spencer reported an average of 3500 views per month, and has seen this number increase to more than 7,000 views in the current year.

Spexhair.com has been publishing ethical and honest guidance for those suffering from hair loss for the past several years. The site encourages those seeking hair restoration and support in hair loss to regain confidence and treat their hair loss with the appropriate methods. Media attention garnered through the Times Online, The Daily Mail and The Guardian Online such as the article which discusses celebrity hair loss with the likes of Gordan Ramsey, Shane Warne and Many others, Spencer Stevenson sheds light on an industry that still has a lot of mystique around it, which in turn has led to the continued success of the blog, along with Spencer's ongoing efforts to support individuals through one on one consults and confidential assessments for treatment. He has recently said: "I'm pleased about spexhair.com getting more and more exposure in the past few years. I started the blog as I never wanted another man to go through the misinformation and bad recommendations from unethical salesmen and even some doctors about how to really go about treating hair loss."

Spencer Stevenson has been involved in the treatments of thousands of hair loss sufferers and has assisted in various transplants and other treatments to help his clients regain confidence and aesthetics. He has also been quoted in saying: "You can read all about me. I am an open book and I have gone out of my way trying to educate the layperson that hair loss treatment is not a one size fits all solution, far from it. In fact it is a very personal and individual treatment should one wish to pursue that needs to be considered carefully with all factors to give a person who suffers from hair loss the best advice that will give them the best possible outcome. That's why I created spexhair.com a one stop site recommended by the top Industry Hair loss Doctors and respected authorities which makes me very proud."

Spencer encourages those interested in learning more about his work with hair loss and his online reputation to visit his website.
